On 6 January 1952, LIU Shan-pen (劉善本), Chief of Staff of the Chinese Communist Air Force, accompanied by a number of Soviet advisers and subordinate officers, arrived in Mukden by plane. He conferred there with the Northeast Air Force Command and high-level Chinese and Soviet officials in regard to strengthening the Northeast Air Force and mobilizing the Northeast Anti-Aircraft Defense.

Rumors are circulating in Mukden that UN aircraft will soon stage large scale raids on the Northeast and that Mukden will be attacked with atomic bombs.¹

On 11 January, LIU Shao-chi, accompanied by a Soviet adviser and three technical experts, left Peiping West Field by plane for T'aiyuan. The group was to inspect the T'aiyuan Arsenal and other heavy industrial plants and to give guidance for carrying out the Anti-Corruption, Anti-Waste, and Anti-Bureaucracy Campaign in that locality.
